The scientific program of the seminar includes two working days on July 2 and 3.

Schedule reports: 10.00 - 13.00; 15.00 - 18.00.

On July 4, for those who wish to participate, a water excursion around Baikal to the "White Stone" locality is organized for a fee. The excursion program is attached below. Registration with payment for a boat trip is made during the registration of participants on June 30 and July 1.

On July 5 and 6, at 15.00, an organized departure of participants from the bases on Baikal to Ulan-Ude is scheduled.

Technical presentation of reports and working languages

Reports of the participants should be in the form of electronic presentations in English, which the speakers need to transfer from their portable USB-drives to the computer of the Organizing Committee before the meeting. The working languages for the report are Russian and English. Seminar meetings will be held in the conference hall on the basis of "OSLIK".

Peculiarities of weather on Baikal

In the summer at Baikal it can be very hot, but it can be very cold, and in one day. This temperature difference is especially characteristic of June and the second half of August, but in July the winds bring tangible coolness. Therefore, you need to take all kinds of clothes with you - both to sunbathe and not to freeze. Be sure to need something warm and windproof, preferably with a hood, and a knitted cap, because the main supplier of discomfort is the cold Baikal wind. Light closed clothing for sun protection and a cap with a long visor or a wide-brimmed hat are also desirable.
